

Project Summary: Metropolitan Center for Regional Studies Web Site

<http://metropolitan.research.ucf.edu>

"The expertise in web design and strategy will prove to be an invaluable asset to the success of our office, as it is so important for us to communicate effectively with the community."

-Linda Chapin, Director, Metropolitan Center for Regional Studies

Overview

The newly redesigned Metropolitan Center for Regional Studies Web site provides the Center with an updated layout, bringing it up to par with the main UCF site. The content of the site has been updated with the latest reports and initiatives created by the Center.

Purpose

The Metropolitan Center for Regional Studies is a highly strategic component of UCF's research arena. Working closely with local governments and regional growth organizations, the Center works in partnership with other institutions and organizations committed to a shared future that advances economic prosperity, social cohesion, environmental protection and individual well being.

The new Web site allows the Center to point visitors to their site, knowing that a good first impression is being made. The project was completed by Digital Media, Techrangers, and Web Strategy team members of Course Development and Web Services (CDWS).

Maintenance

The College of Arts and Humanities will maintain the Center's site, including the updating of the site content, the publication of events and the addition of new reports, partners and publications.

Features

- ✓ Message from the Director, Linda Chapin
- ✓ Staff Biographies
- ✓ Related News & Event Listings
- ✓ Descriptions of Center's Work
- ✓ 'UCF Metro' television program descriptions
- ✓ Links to Metropolitan Center Partners
- ✓ Contact Information Page